UGEQ defeated by slim margin

by ELLY ALBOIM and PETER ALLNUTT

Fifty-one percent of a heavy vote yesterday rejected the Students' Council decision to join l'Union Générale des Etudiants du Québec.

However, the validity of the referendum has been questioned because of alleged irregularities. The issue will be discussed at the Students' Council meeting tonight in Room 123 of the Union.

The final vote was 2859 or 51.2% against, 2548 or 45.7% in favour, and 174 votes were invalidated.

This was the largest turnout at a student election in McGill's history.

The faculties of Law, Architecture and Medicine registered the heaviest negative votes with most other faculties coming out slightly against.

Robert Vineberg, re-elected in the anti-UGEQ Law Faculty by a large majority, felt that the referendum was not legally binding on Council. He said that the interpretation of the referendum was up to the outgoing Council.

"If we can negotiate billingualism and membership in CUS then it is possible that we can stay in," said Vineberg. He favoured remaining in UGEQ for a ten-month trial period.

Commenting on the outcome of the referendum, Students' Society President Sharon Sholzberg said "If the Council declares the referendum valid... French Canada will probably believe that McGill students don't want to work together with Quebec students to solve common problems."

Lionel Chetwynd, one of the leaders of the movement to reject the Council decision, pointed out that the "margin of victory was obviously in the graduate and professional faculties.

"This may mean that the greatest single issue in UGEQ was student syndicalism and not CUS or language. I don't think that it is a rejection of French Canada but a rejection of the terms of our involvement in the New Quebec," he added.

External Vice-President Ken Cabatoff regarded the outcome as "a fairly serious defeat" for the moderates in French Canada.

"We still have a future in Canada but we do not have a future in Quebec until we are able to find another similar opportunity to work in concert with the majority of students in Quebec," he said.

Saeed Mirza, immediate past President of the Students' Society, said "the results of the election show that the Students' Society does not believe in student syndicalism which is the basis of thought and action of UGEQ."

When asked about his future in campus politics he said, "My job was to bring the issue to the campus. I have done it and will now return into retirement."

The validity of the vote was questioned when it was reported that the poll in Wilson Hall (School of Nursing) ran out of ballots and that some officials punched the wrong holes of student cards in the Arts Building.

Chief Returning Officer Ken Roberts, decided to invalidate the poll in Wilson Hall after 179 students had cast ballots, 94 in favour of and 85 against UGEQ.

Explaining his decision, Roberts said that "a precedent exists whereby, if only one poll is affected by an irregularity, and if the result of that poll could not have significantly affected the outcome of the vote, then rather than invalidating the entire election, the poll itself is invalidated."

Eleven new SC reps elected in heavy voting

BY JUDY REBICK AND JIM SMITH

The new Students' Council elected yesterday reflected the vastly divergent views of the different faculties.

On the UGEQ issue, which dominated the campaign, the Council, like the campus, is split down the middle. Five representatives are for joining UGEQ, four are against and two have expressed no opinion.

The new Council members are: Arts and Science — Morris Goldberg, Stephen Schecter, and Norman Segalowitz; Commerce—Charles Kasner; Architecture—Phillip Gooch; Engineering—Frank Farago and Ross Lunan; Law—Robert Vineberg; Medicine—Arnold Aberman; Nursing—Elizabeth Langdon; P&OT—Margaret Leworthy.

Goldberg, Schecter and Segalowitz are all strongly pro-UGEQ. All three are members of the External Affairs Branch of the Students' Council and all were delegates to the UGEQ Congress. Schecter, co-author of the UGEQ report, polled the most votes.

Interviewed after the election, all three questioned the validity of the UGEQ referendum on the grounds that the issues were badly presented.

Segalowitz said that the reason for the negative vote in the referendum was that tactics such as the "Resistance" pamphlet confused the debate.

"People couldn't understand basic issues, for papers like the "Resistance" were misrepresenting certain facts. The referendum was not significant because of the misrepresentation and split vote."

Schecter also attacked the tactics of the anti-UGEQ group as "deceitful". He agreed that "people did not know what they were voting for or what was at stake."

All three candidates said that since they were elected on a pro-UGEQ platform, they will continue to support joining UGEQ despite the results of the referendum.

The representatives from Medicine, Commerce and Architecture campaigned on anti-UGEQ platforms.

Aberman said, "I think the referendum shows that McGill students are against syndicalism but favour greater co-operation with their French counterparts."

Aberman said that he would not favour a ten-month trial period but "if UGEQ changes its fundamental syndicalist nature then it would be possible for McGill to enter into the Union."

Vineberg, re-elected as Law representative, interpreted the results of the referendum differently. He felt that the campus rejected membership in UGEQ under the present conditions, but favoured remaining in for a ten-month trial period.

"If we can negotiate bilingualism and membership in CUS then it is possible that we can stay in," Vineberg said.

Graduate studies rep resigns from Council

Ronald Kay, representative of the Faculty of Graduate Studies and Research on the Students' Council, resigned yesterday.

Kay's resignation is effective December 31. A by-election was expected to be held early in January to fill the vacant seat.

In a letter to Students' Society President Sharon Sholzberg, Kay said he was stepping down because his electorate was not informed of the "unofficial extension" of his term to 18 months from one year.

"Because the people who elected me thought that I would represent them only for one calendar year, and because these individuals were not informed in any way before the referendum, which made it impossible for them to express their opinion on this breach of custom, I feel conscience-bound to reseign my office," Kay said.

The resignation followed the publication of letters in the Daily from graduate students who protested the extension of Kay's term. They described Council's decision as "illegal".

McGill chooses isolation says UGEQ executive

The UGEQ executive last night issued a statement that McGill students had chosen "to isolate themselves" by voting to pull out of UGEQ.

Following is the text of their statement: "Our friends at McGill had the choice between participating with all other young intellectual workers to build a new society in Quebec, and isolation.

"They chose to isolate themselves. That is their right.

"But UGEQ, which represents the great majority of Quebec students, will continue to concentrate all possible efforts towards bringing about a new social structure and ultimately attaining a better life for the Quebec people.

"We will build the new society without McGill because that is their wish." When asked if McGill would be able to join UGEQ at a later date, Vice-President for External Affairs Pierre Lefrançois answered, "This is all we have to say at the present time."

Election Complaints

All students in the faculties of Nursing (BSc (N)), Divinity, Education, and Graduate Studies who were denied the right to vote for the UGEQ referendum, between the hours of 4 pm-5 pm yesterday, due to insufficient ballots at that poll, may register their complaints in writing to Susan Lytle, SC representative for BSc(N) and P&OT at the SC office before 5 pm today.

"Les anglais sont toujours le même"
MARTY and SUE

The morning after the night before

Well, we've had the referendum that this journal called for on November 15. The results are not very clear. They do indicate, however, that a large number of students feel we should not join UGEQ and a large number of students feel we should.

We do not feel that this indicates that any McGill students do not recognise the importance of what is happening in French Canada and the importance of McGill as a part of the evolution that is taking place.

The question is now: where do we go from here? Some meaningful contact must be established between the mainstream of McGill and the mainstream of the French student movement. McGill has tried over the past year to do this outside of UGEQ. It has become clear that we have not even begun to scale the wall that separates the French and English in Quebec.

It has been clear to us and it will be clear to students in the future that McGill must one day join UGEQ. The question now, of course, is whether UGEQ will ever be willing to accept us. We must remember that our assumptions of their hostility towards us come nowhere near to their assumptions of our hostility towards them. To French Canadian students who have not been on this campus over the past two weeks the results of the referendum will confirm their suspicions of us. Neither side has yet been willing to sacrifice enough of its pride to suspend judgement on the values of another culture until familiarity and understanding have brought agreement. In this case, the initiative rested with us and we failed to respond.

Future generations will regard this as one more in what appears to be an unlimited number of unsuccessful attempts at the Canadian experiment. This in itself is not the whole tragedy. For the Canadian experiment has become the world experiment and when students demonstrate that not even at the student level where one has presumably no interests to protect, where one should be able to work out on the basis of reason and understanding alone the problem of two national groups working in permanent union, then the problem of world peace begins to look totally insoluble. Some day someone will press a button with the attitude that the other side should have made compromises before we joined them.

Chetwynd Replies

Dear Sir:

To set the facts straight, I feel that certain points should be brought to the attention of your readers:

1) I debated the UGEQ issue solely at the invitation of
   a) the Commerce Undergraduate Society in the case of the Union Debate
   b) The Engineering Undergraduate Society in the case of the debate sponsored by them
   c) The CBC in the case of the program "The Way Things Are"
2) While I met with the "Rational Committee ..." and discussed the UGEQ issue with them, I did not (and had no reason to) see a copy of "Resistance" until after its distribution on Campus. I was not consulted as to its content or distribution, nor was I consulted vis-a-vis the use of my name thereon. Further, I hereby disassociate myself formally and in fact from any further actions or statements made by them
3) I am not now, nor have I ever been a candidate for the presidency of the Students' Society. Far from hoping to replace Miss Sholzberg (as you suggest) I have continually affirmed my belief in her good faith on this issue, and have constantly stated in private and public that she should not take the matter as one of confidence, and that she should not resign regardless of the UGEQ vote.
4) I fought UGEQ on principle; I believed that there was too much doubt among the student body for UGEQ to be endorsed. I felt that given present circumstances, the terms of our adhesion were too one-sided.
5) I am not a racist, but rather I admire the beneficial effects that positive cultural self-realisation has had in this province. At no time did I make statements that could be construed as racist.

All this you knew when you wrote the editorial; I had confided in you that I had been approached to seek the presidency of the Students' Council; you knew that I had rejected the idea for many reasons, including advice from you. Your editorial insofar as the impression it created about me was unprincipled, dishonest, and served to influence the UGEQ vote by emotive, and (in the opinion of some) "Racist" tactics. Besides this, it failed to present the truth you knew about me and why I argued as I did.

H. L. Chetwynd, BCL II

(Ed. note: The Daily would like to apologise to Mr. Chetwynd if yesterday's editorial seemed to impute racist motives to him as a person. We agree that it is unfortunate that this construction can be put on that part of the editorial dealing with him. Now, to the other points:

1. We are glad to see that Mr. Chetwynd has disassociated himself from "Resistance". We take this as confirmation of our main charges.
2. On private conversations, there are as many interpretations as one could wish for, all of them unprovable. We must point out, however, that our information as to Mr. Chetwynd's political ambitions did not arise as a result of private conversations with him. We further agree that, in public, he has stated Miss Sholzberg should continue in office. But we still feel he is being less than frank about his political future. We did not know that Mr. Chetwynd had finally rejected the notion of seeking the presidency despite suggestion to him that he should not.
3. Our editorial was written only after the most careful consideration and the main points we wished to make we considered of over-riding importance. We still do.

Kay Tenders Resignation

Dear Miss Sholzberg,

I wish to submit my resignation, to be effective Dec. 31 as Student Council representative of Graduate Studies and Research, since it has come to my attention that my electorate were not informed of the unofficial extension of my tenure from one to one a half years.

I was elected on Wednesday, November 26, 1964, under the old constitution of the Students' Society, according to which I was to serve from January 1, 1965 to December 31, 1965.

A meeting of the Students' Executive Council was held in the Walter M. Stewart room of the old Students' Union on Saturday, December 19, 1964. The main purpose of this meeting was to discuss the draft of the proposed new constitution of the Students' Society. The new constitution was presented by the chairman of the New Constitution Committee, Mr. William Fraiberg, and examined collectively by the Council members. Mr. Fraiberg, Mr. L. Soroka, Mr. J. Bell, and Mr. A. Ross, as members of the New Constitution Committee, answered any questions put forth by Council members.

The meeting continued throughout the day. All matters pertaining to the constitution's clauses were examined, discussed and voted upon. In some cases slight modifications were made. Under the old constitution, the representative from the Faculty of Graduate Studies and Research was elected between November 20 and December 10 of each year and was to serve for the calendar year following his or her election. Under the new constitution the two representatives from Graduate Studies are elected between February 22 on March 7 of each year to serve for the fiscal year following their election.

To ensure continuity in the transition from one constitution to the other, it was suggested that either the graduate representative elected by the old constitution hold office until elections were held between February 22 and March 7, 1964, when his seat would be open for election, or that the graduate representative elected by the old constitution hold office until the election held between February 22 and March 7, 1965. A discussion followed, and the latter suggestion was approved in a vote. I accepted this extension as necessary to the smooth functioning of the Council under the new constitution.

The entire proposed revised constitution was published in a separate issue of the Daily on January 15, 1965. A decision was taken in an open meeting of the Students' Society to submit the text of the new constitution to a referendum; this meeting took place February 1, 1965. The meeting also rejected one, and accepted two, subamendments. The referendum held on February 3, 1965 accepted the new constitution.

At the Students' Council meeting of November 15, 1965, the chairman brought up the question of my term of office. The following motion was carried: "That the seat on the Students' Council for the Postgraduate Students' Society representative be held by the present representative under the new constitution until the end of the fiscal year." The voting was: six in favour, three against, and two abstentions. This motion was a ratification of the unofficial motion passed by the old Council.

I am informed that the unofficial motion passed by Council on December 19, 1964, extending my term of office, had not been communicated to the students in the Postgraduate Society prior to the open meeting held on February 1, 1965, when a referendum was agreed upon. I could find no record of the unofficial motion either in the Students' Council minutes, the PGSS Council minutes, or in any campus publication. Furthermore, I have discovered that the Faculty of Graduate Studies and Research representative, Mr. Stephen Windisch, was absent from the December 19 meeting and therefore did not communicate the information to the PGSS Council.

Because the people who elected me thought that I would represent them only for one calendar year, and because these individuals were not informed in any way before the referendum, which made it impossible for them to express their opinion on this breach of custom, I feel conscience-bound to resign my office, since I have now almost completed the term of one year anticipated by my electorate.

Noting that he took the action as Chief Returning Officer, Roberts added that "should the Students' Council decide that there be another referendum, I will abide by that decision."

Miss Sholzberg commented: "Legally an election should be invalidated if only one person is deprived of his vote.

"That is the legal solution but it is possible that the SC will not make a decision on legal principles but perhaps on other grounds it considers more important," she added.

When asked if the executive would resign, Miss Sholzberg said "I'll have something to say about that at the Council meeting."

Mirza said that "this is for the Students' Council to decide themselves. They must search their souls and decide."

When asked if the result implied a vote of no-confidence, Cabatoff replied, "In the legal sense, no.

"In the moral sense, it indicates a lack of confidence in our leadership to some extent, but in that the referendum was defeated by such a slim majority, and that many voted on the basis of issues, it indicates that there is not total disagreement with the executive."

He has also been an active worker for civil rights in the American south, and was included by Esquire magazine in its list of the 28 most talked-about people on U.S. campuses. At present, he is a leading figure in the radical left-wing movement, the W.E.B. Dubois clubs.
